The Wine Opinions panel of wine trade professionals was another 8% who planned to drink less wine in January. The small percentage of wine drinkers planning to participate in “Dry January” was 18% in 2020. This represented the same percentage of both the high frequency and occasional wine consumer who planned to refrain from drinking any beverage alcohol in January. There was a slight decrease in the percentage of wine drinkers who plan to stop drinking beverage alcohol this month.

The small percentage of wine drinkers planning to participate in “Dry January” was 18% in 2020. This represented the same percentage of both the high frequency and occasional wine consumer who planned to refrain from drinking any beverage alcohol in January. There was a slight decrease in the percentage of wine drinkers who plan to stop drinking beverage alcohol this month.

The Wine Opinions panel of wine trade professionals was another 8% who planned to drink less wine in January. The small percentage of wine drinkers planning to participate in “Dry January” was 18% in 2020. This represented the same percentage of both the high frequency and occasional wine consumer who planned to refrain from drinking any beverage alcohol in January. There was a slight decrease in the percentage of wine drinkers who plan to stop drinking beverage alcohol this month.

The small percentage of wine drinkers planning to participate in “Dry January” was 18% in 2020. This represented the same percentage of both the high frequency and occasional wine consumer who planned to refrain from drinking any beverage alcohol in January. There was a slight decrease in the percentage of wine drinkers who plan to stop drinking beverage alcohol this month.

The Wine Opinions panel of wine trade professionals was another 8% who planned to drink less wine in January. The small percentage of wine drinkers planning to participate in “Dry January” was 18% in 2020. This represented the same percentage of both the high frequency and occasional wine consumer who planned to refrain from drinking any beverage alcohol in January. There was a slight decrease in the percentage of wine drinkers who plan to stop drinking beverage alcohol this month.

The small percentage of wine drinkers planning to participate in “Dry January” was 18% in 2020. This represented the same percentage of both the high frequency and occasional wine consumer who planned to refrain from drinking any beverage alcohol in January. There was a slight decrease in the percentage of wine drinkers who plan to stop drinking beverage alcohol this month.

The small percentage of wine drinkers planning to participate in “Dry January” was 18% in 2020. This represented the same percentage of both the high frequency and occasional wine consumer who planned to refrain from drinking any beverage alcohol in January. There was a slight decrease in the percentage of wine drinkers who plan to stop drinking beverage alcohol this month.

The small percentage of wine drinkers planning to participate in “Dry January” was 18% in 2020. This represented the same percentage of both the high frequency and occasional wine consumer who planned to refrain from drinking any beverage alcohol in January. There was a slight decrease in the percentage of wine drinkers who plan to stop drinking beverage alcohol this month.

The small percentage of wine drinkers planning to participate in “Dry January” was 18% in 2020. This represented the same percentage of both the high frequency and occasional wine consumer who planned to refrain from drinking any beverage alcohol in January. There was a slight decrease in the percentage of wine drinkers who plan to stop drinking beverage alcohol this month.

The small percentage of wine drinkers planning to participate in “Dry January” was 18% in 2020. This represented the same percentage of both the high frequency and occasional wine consumer who planned to refrain from drinking any beverage alcohol in January. There was a slight decrease in the percentage of wine drinkers who plan to stop drinking beverage alcohol this month.

The small percentage of wine drinkers planning to participate in “Dry January” was 18% in 2020. This represented the same percentage of both the high frequency and occasional wine consumer who planned to refrain from drinking any beverage alcohol in January. There was a slight decrease in the percentage of wine drinkers who plan to stop drinking beverage alcohol this month.